About the Newsletter

Items are listed by due date (if applicable) and by category. We welcome updates relevant to the age studies world, including calls for papers, journal articles, recently published books, twitter feeds, blogs, job postings and others. We also invite brief (450 words or less) thought pieces on issues or ideas pertaining to aging and age studies. The deadline for submissions is the 20th of the prior month. Please visit our website for more information or to submit an item for the newsletter. Thanks to all who contributed news items for this issue of NANAS eNews!

Calls for Abstracts, Papers, or Panels

Active CFPs are arranged by submission deadline.

No Deadline Specified or Ongoing Submissions Accepted

Practicing Oral History Monographic Series

Left Coast Press invites manuscripts and inquiries for the series Practicing Oral History. If you practice oral history as a museum curator, public historian, librarian, transcriber, community activist, educator or related field consider sharing your experience through publication. We publish titles in methodology from any field or approach that applies oral history. It is not necessary to have a fully developed idea. We would like to hear from you at any stage in your project. Contact series editor Nancy MacKay, nancymackay@gmail.com to discuss your idea. And check the Left Coast Press catalog here, <http://www.lcoastpress.com/index.php>.

Anthropology & Aging

Anthropology & Aging, published by the Association for Anthropology & Gerontology (AAGE) in cooperation with the University of Pittsburgh, is now an open-access peer-reviewed scholarly journal. Submissions are accepted on a rolling basis through the journal website, where detailed author information is available.

Anthropology & Aging is intended as a resource for anthropologists interested in issues related to aging (including intergenerational relationships, caregiving, population aging, human rights, and global health) and aging studies scholars interested in anthropology. Submissions that employ cross-disciplinary approaches and novel methodological strategies are particularly encouraged, but standard anthropological styles are also acceptable.

PGWAM Now Accepting Rolling Submissions

The Postgraduate Journal of Women, Ageing and Media (PGWAM) is a new online journal aimed at postgraduates and early career researchers and run by postgraduates with support from more experienced academics. The journal aims to make ‘thinking with age’ a key lens from which to approach research focused on women, ageing and the media (film, television, screen media, popular music, advertising radio and the press).

PGWAM invites submissions in article form, but also warmly welcomes contributions which take a more creative or innovative approach, such as photo essays and reports. Please contact us for more information or to make a proposal. Please submit your manuscript via email: pgwamjournal@glos.ac.uk

Lexington Studies in Communication and Storytelling

We're looking for book proposals for the new peer-reviewed series Lexington Studies in Communication and Storytelling. This series engages scholarship in mediated storytelling: be it the traditional book or television program, the performed oral narrative, or the emerging media platform. Interdisciplinary in scope, this series looks at the myriad theoretical and practical approaches to the story. From the audience member-turned creator to new narrative, this series explores what storytelling means in the twenty-first century.

Proposals should include a prospectus, a detailed table of contents, one or two sample chapters, and a CV for all authors. For more information, including complete submission guidelines, please contact series editor Kathleen M. Ryan, kathleen.ryan@colorado.edu.

Aging & Society Call for Book Proposals

The Aging & Society Knowledge Community is seeking new book proposals for academic works. We welcome submissions from across national origins, experience levels, and disciplinary perspectives. Our publishing process is not driven by potential sales, but by the quality of the work. Books on niche topics or specialized subject matter are welcome. We accept proposals for manuscripts between 30,000 and 150,000 words for individual or jointly authored works, edited collections, re-issued or out-of-copyright classics with new introductions, and Ph.D. dissertations or theses that are rewritten to conform to 'book' writing style and genre. <http://agingandsociety.com/books/call-for-books>

Time and Timelessness: Conceptions of the Past, Present, and Future in Cultural Studies
Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, OH, April 1-3, 2016

Theories about the concept of time have challenged the way we see and experience the world around us, and time pervades every research project imaginable. Yet time defies a single meaning for the world's populations, past and present. From interpretations of memory/loss to the popularity of dystopian future narratives, and from film reboots to social justice, the concept of time shapes understandings of our cultures and ourselves. By studying time and its influence on politics, popular culture, and everyday life, we seek work that asks how the "here and now" is shaped by the "before" and helps create the "after." Examining critical and popular relationships with time reveals the impetus behind nostalgia machines, science fiction, the technological advances of our near-future, and other aspects of continuity and change. CFP: Psychosocial Research on Aging

You are invited to submit your work to an upcoming joint special issue of the Journal of Gerontology: Psychological Sciences and Social Sciences on methodological innovations in psychosocial research on aging. Authors are encouraged to apply innovative methods and data resources to emerging or core questions in social gerontology. Authors also are encouraged to conclude with a brief assessment of the value of the innovative method or data source used; that is, how might innovative methods advance our substantive knowledge above and beyond what we would learn using "traditional" methods? Please submit your structured abstract for consideration by January 4, 2016. For further details on the scope and timeline of the special issue, please see:

Trans-Scripts: Design in Humanistic Inquiry

The theme of the sixth volume of Trans-Scripts is "Design in Humanistic Inquiry." We welcome a wide range of submissions from a variety of disciplines. In asking after the ways that we produce and imagine the tangible and intangible, we aim to explore not only how things are produced, but also how they become imbued with meaning. We also seek to reflect on how our understandings of self and other might be produced through our interactions with the material world. In this issue, therefore, we will explore diverse perspectives on design in the humanities and social sciences. In thinking about design, broadly defined, we will ruminate on the various processes, practices, social relations, politics, and temporalities that collectively contribute to the production of things, selves, and ideologies. For more information, visit the Trans-Scripts journal website at <http://www.humanities.uci.edu/collective/hctr/trans-scripts/>. Deadline for submissions: January 8, 2016

The Second Conference of the International Association for Cognitive Semiotics

Maria Curie-Sklodowska University, Lublin, Poland, June 20-22, 2016

Cognitive semiotics is the study of meaning-making writ large: in language and by means of other sign vehicles, as well as in perception, and in action. Cognitive semiotics investigates the properties of our meaningful interactions with the surroundings – as well as those of other animals – in all domains, in the natural as well as in the social world. It integrates perspectives, methods and insights from cognitive science, cognitive linguistics and semiotics, placing signs and sign use (in the broadest sense) into the wider context of cognitive, social, and neurobiological processes, using experimental methods, as well as classical text analysis and theoretical disquisitions. The International Association for Cognitive Semiotics (IACS) aims at the further establishment of Cognitive Semiotics as the trans-disciplinary study of meaning, combining concepts, theories and methods from the humanities and the social and natural sciences. Gender and Generations: Spaces, times and relationships in cultural-historical perspective

Trieste, Italy, July 18-22, 2016

The perspective of gender studies and the study of generations developed in remarkably different cultural and historiographical contexts. However, in the current state of cultural studies, which is characterized by a marked interdisciplinary profile, they share the function of drawing attention to the fact that every subject is positioned, in a relationship that represents his/her 'status' and social and historical 'quality'. By focusing on the terms gender and generations (as distinct categories and reference fields or else as a particularly complex binomial) the conference invites to investigate, from a cultural history perspective, specific factors in the development and processing of identities. It will explore how in different places and times the anthropologically unavoidable variables gender and generation interact on the cultural level in the processes of formation, stabilization and transformation of community and social structures. The Nature of Our Humanity: HERA Annual Conference

New Orleans, LA, March 23-26, 2016

The humanities have always grappled with life's most important questions and challenges: not only those posed by death, destruction, and loss, but also with the hope and regeneration found in human resiliency and recovery. HERA invites papers from across a wide range of humanities on the interaction between: humanity and nature; loss and recovery; human resiliency; faith; religion, and nature; ecosystems and eco-biological research and their implications for humanity; humanity and essence; human achievement and destruction; the representation and reality of nature in all art forms; nature and nurture-as well as any and all other areas that clarify what it means to be human and how nature plays a role in that elucidation. Conference on Narrative

Idaho State University, April 8, 2016

What is narrative? How is it defined? Does that definition vary according to academic discipline? These are just a few of the questions that the Conference on Narrative seeks to answer. The College of Arts and Letters at Idaho State University invites proposals for papers for a one-day conference exploring the use of narrative in academic settings. Possible topics include, but are not limited to: the use of narrative within (or across) disciplines, one's own use of narrative in scholarly work, unexpected settings for narrative (i.e. the sciences, music, dance). We welcome individual paper proposals from faculty and graduate students at any level. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 19, 2016

Interculturalism: Cultures and Identities

Mansfield College, Oxford, Oxford, UK, July 18-20, 2016

Interculturalism stands at the interface between the individual, local groups, societies and cultures. The previous meeting of this project recognised that identity is not something which is fixed and predetermined but rather is continuously created and recreated from the day-to-day flow of living in communities. With mobility not simply a commonplace factor in society but continuing to rapidly expand, people are faced with challenges to and changes in their own identity as a result of encounters with new cultures, new ways of living and new ways of thinking. The 2016 conference will examine the meaning and parameters of Interculturalism, how it is studied and what it means. How can we talk meaningfully of interculturalism? What role does hybridity play in understanding the way cultures morph, adapt and become suited to their context? Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 29, 2016

Persons and Sexualities

Mansfield College, Oxford, UK, July 10-12, 2016

The project seeks to develop a space for discussion and debate about the interplay of identities, orientations, desires, pleasures, taboos, relations, behaviours and practices of sex and sexuality in a global context and across a range of critical, contextual and cultural perspectives. Exploring the relationship between sexuality and personhood, specifically, we seek to understand how sex and sexuality shape citizenship, belonging, identity, and expression. The project looks beyond social constructions and practices of gender, sex, and sexuality to focus on notions of embodiment. That is, what does it mean to embody sexuality? We welcome traditional papers, panels, workshop proposals and other forms of performance. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 29, 2016

Materialities of Care: Encountering Health and Illness through Artefacts and Architecture 24th Sociology of Health and Illness Monograph

Proposals are invited for the 24th Sociology of Health and Illness Monograph, which explores the role of material culture within health and social care encounters, including everyday objects, dress, interiors and architecture. Everyday artefacts actively mediate practices, identities and lived experiences of health and illness, prompting reflection on medical and care practices; professional status; social divisions and distinctions; and embodiment. Science and technology studies literature has drawn attention to materialities in medical practice (e.g., medical technologies, experimental materials and instrumentation), but more mundane aspects of material culture have received less conceptual attention.

We invite papers which use an analysis of everyday 'things' to engage with wider issues within medical sociology, as well as speaking to interdisciplinary literatures. Papers which consider the experience of care providers or those receiving care are welcomed, as are papers examining the perspective of designers and architects, who are not normally considered healthcare professionals, yet shape landscapes of care. In particular, submissions which add conceptual and empirical depth to discussions of materialities in health and social care are encouraged, as well as those which are reflexive about methods for capturing materialities. Potential contributors should send an abstract of up to 600 words to Christina.Buse@york.ac.uk, Daryl.Martin@york.ac.uk and Sarah.Nettleton@york.ac.uk by January 30, 2016.

The Presentation of the Self – Summer Residential Conference

Wolfson College, Oxford, July 15-17, 2016

Proposals are invited for the 2016 Summer Residential Conference. The conference theme is The Presentation of the Self, and Professor David Morgan will be the Keynote Speaker. Please supply titles and brief abstracts and send as a word attachment or in the body of an email. Places are limited and there is likely to be much interest in the conference so an early response is recommended. (The cost of the conference, depending on membership category, will be between £350-£380). For more information, contact Jenny Byrne (jb5@soton.ac.uk) and Michael Erben (michaelerben@gmail.com). Deadline for submissions: January 30, 2016

International Social & Applied Gerontology Symposium

Akdeniz University Conference Hall, Turkey, October 19-21, 2016

This symposium aims to strike a balance in the examination of population and individual aging by exploring the positive potentials of being an older person, while at the same time giving due recognition and attention to intervention strategies for assisting those older people made vulnerable by the passage of time. The symposium planners recognize that the overall success of proceedings will depend upon the extent to which the ensuring discourses and disagreements about modern day aging can advance the gerontological imagination. More than ever, there is an urgent need for new and realistic conversations relating to aging that include due recognition and understandings of a) the diversity of older populations and b) the need for innovation and quality assurance measures relating to the development and implementation of programs and services for older people that reflect cultural, ethnic and language differences. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 31, 2016

Globalizing Social Problems: The Society for the Study of Social Problems Annual Meeting

Westin Seattle Hotel, Seattle, WA, August 19-21, 2016

All of the social problems we study today are impacted by various global forces. Virtually every subfield and nearly all research – including that which seems to have much more narrow geographic or institutional foci – can be enriched by “bringing the global in,” and locating the specific sociological facts in term of their places in a matrix of various worldwide vectors of global influence, flows, and structures. Inequalities of gender, race, disability, sexual orientation/identity, aging, health, labor, and class in this country (and around the world) are increasingly and inexorably connected to worldwide currents; institutions like schools, the family, the criminal justice system, workplaces and neighborhoods are also rapidly “globalizing.” If we “leave this out,” our work will be not only scientifically “incomplete,” but also less likely to be relevant for formulating strategies for social change. I challenge all of you to bring a “global imagination” to your analysis to complement our sociological one. Access the full cfp here. 11th Annual CDSSA Conference: Crippin' Canada

York University, Toronto, April 8, 2016

York University's Critical Disability Studies Student Association (CDSSA) invites graduate students, community researchers, and activists to submit proposals for the 11th annual CDSSA conference. This year's theme, Crippin' Canada, pays homage to the multiple ways in which people with disabilities and their allies have worked to challenge dominant structures and modes of representation. The act/art of cripin' is about questioning and resisting conceptions of normalcy as well as the assumptions and practices that attempt to disappear, regulate, and rationalize difference. Robert McRuer (2006), in cripin' queer theorist Butler's performativity toward compulsory and normative able-embodiment, enjoins us to imagine otherwise. Proposals may include but are not limited to: papers, workshops, and arts-based presentations. Interested applicants should submit a 250-300 word abstract to cdssa@yugsa.ca by February 1, 2016. More details can be found at <https://cdssa.wordpress.com/>

Seminar: Writing Old Age in Twenty-First-Century British Fiction

13th ESSE Conference, Galway, Ireland, August 22-26, 2016.

Convenors:

Sarah Falcus (University of Huddersfield, U.K.): S.J.Falcus@hud.ac.uk

Maricel Oró-Piqueras (University of Lleida, Spain): maricel.oro@dal.udl.cat

The publication of Barbara F. Waxman's (1990) and Margaret M. Gullette's (1989) seminal works on representations of characters in their late middle and old age marked the beginning of a new interest in literary and cultural studies. In the past two decades, this field of 'literary gerontology' has secured a place within the concomitant rise of humanistic or cultural gerontology. From representations of ageing and gender, to the concept of late style and explorations of the affect value of literary texts that explore the ageing process, academic attention has focused on literature and ageing.

Perhaps this is unsurprising in the context of Western societies with rapidly ageing populations. The narrative of economic, social and cultural concern that drives the representation of ageing in countries like Britain makes the need for alternative and multiplicitous representations of ageing more and more urgent. Whilst undoubtedly playing some role in reinforcing restrictive and narrow conceptions of the last stage in human life, cultural conceptions have also challenged restricted stereotypical images of ageing into midlife and old age. In this seminar, we are interested in exploring how contemporary British fiction has risen to the challenge of representing old age and ageing for a new century. Paper proposals (approx. 300 words) as well as a bionote should be sent to the two convenors. The deadline for proposals is February 28, 2016.

Edited Collection: The Mother-in-Law Experience

Dr Jo Parnell and Dr Monica Soeting are seeking submissions for a new edited collection with the working title The Mother-in-Law Experience. This book will take a life writing perspective, and explore the mother-in-law experience from various aspects, drawing accounts of the experience from creative nonfiction literature, letters, diaries, and personal or vicarious experience. Papers should be 1.5 spaced, written in Times New Roman point 12, use M.L.A. style (7th edition), and be no longer than 6000 words in total, not including notes and lists of works cited. Potential contributors should also send their full name, affiliation, and professional experience. Papers should be forwarded to Jo Parnell (Jo.Parnell@newcastle.edu.au) and Monica Soeting (m.f.soeting@vu.nl). Deadline for submissions: February 28, 2016.

Science Fiction and the Medical Humanities (Journal Issue - BMJ Medical Humanities).

As part of the Wellcome Trust funded project 'Science Fiction and the Medical Humanities', the BMJ Group journal Medical Humanities will be publishing a special issue guest edited by Dr Gavin Miller, University of Glasgow. We invite papers of broad interest to an international readership of medical humanities scholars and practising clinicians on the topic 'Science Fiction and the Medical Humanities'. Science fiction is a fertile ground for the imagining of biomedical advances. Technologies such as cloning, prosthetics, and rejuvenation are frequently encountered in science-fiction stories. Science fiction also offers alternative ideals of health and wellbeing, and imagines new forms of disease and suffering. The special issue seeks papers that explore issues of health, illness, and medicine in science-fiction narratives within a variety of media (written word, graphic novel, theatre, dance, film and television, etc.). For further details visit <http://scifimedhums.glasgow.ac.uk/journal-issue/>. Deadline for submissions: March 1, 2016

Transmediations! Communication across Media Borders

Linnæus University, Sweden, October 13-15, 2016

The Linnæus University Centre for Intermedial and Multimodal Studies (IMS) invites researchers and research students to attend the conference Transmediations! Communication across Media Borders. Keynote speakers include Gunther Kress, João Queiroz, and Marie-Laure Ryan. Official language of the conference is English. Proposals for both individual papers and preconfigured sessions of two or three papers are welcome. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: March 1, 2016

Temporal Discombobulations: Time and the Experience of the Gothic

University of Surrey, UK, August 22-24, 2016

Time is one of the fundamental concepts by which we relate to ourselves, others, and the spaces we inhabit. It is at once both an endless, infinite concept and a finite resource, constantly slipping away and being renewed. The Gothic then embodies something of this contradictory nature within the experience of time, manifesting the uncanny unease at its heart. This gives form to a temporal sensory overload: of the moment that is too full, excessive and unable to hold all the differing and contradictory amounts of time it contains. It is the time of the spectre, the dream, the vision, and the infinite. This conference aims to explore the nature of this temporal excess which sees local time disrupted and discombobulated by vast swathes of historical time, parallel worlds or sublime or infinite futures. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: March 4, 2016

Age, Culture, Humanities: An Interdisciplinary Journal

Age, Culture, Humanities promotes cross-disciplinary, critical investigations of the experiences of age, aging, and old age, as seen through the lens of the humanities and arts. The goals are to consider age as a category of identity, advance understanding of the aging process and of age differences across the lifespan, interrogate cultural articulations of aging and old age, and generate innovative, engaging scholarly approaches to the study of age and aging in the humanities. The journal is published annually, in both print and open access digital editions, and submissions are accepted year-round. All manuscripts undergo editorial screening; scholarly articles are selected for publication through a double-blind peer review process. General Submissions are considered year-round. Deadline to ensure consideration for Issue 4: March 15, 2016

The journal invites submissions in the following areas:

- Rigorous scholarly articles on topics that investigate the critical intersections of the arts and humanities with the aging process.
- Scholarly position papers and curated forums.
- Brief, well-theorized essays on teaching humanities approaches to age and aging.
- Reviews of relevant scholarly publications, conferences or symposia, digital humanities projects and research tools, and proposals for extended review essays.
- Proposals for themed clusters in future issues.

Age, Culture, Humanities 2016 Graduate Student Essay Contest

Current graduate students in any relevant discipline are eligible to submit a manuscript (6,000- 9,000 words) for consideration. The winning manuscript will be published in the 2016 issue of the journal. Submission deadline: March 15, 2016

Find the journal and submission guidelines at ageculturehumanities.org. Address questions to the editors, Cynthia Port and Aagje Swinnen, at ageculturehumanities@coastal.edu. To order a print copy of the journal, see the Athenaeum Press website at <http://theathenaeumpress.com/jach.html>.

2016 GSA Annual Scientific Meeting

New Orleans, LA, November 16-20, 2016

GSA President Nancy Morrow-Howell, MSW, PhD, has chosen "New Lens on Aging, Changing Attitudes, Expanding Possibilities" as the 2016 meeting theme. She wrote, "This theme reflects my scholarly interest on productive engagement in later life as well as my on-going concern about ageism. Research has demonstrated that ageism is still alive and well in our attitudes, behaviors, programs, and policies; and it affects employment, health care practices, psychological well-being, family dynamics, and more. I hope you will think about how our work can contribute to changing ageist attitudes that limit the potential of late life, that undermine our efforts to promote healthy aging and that thwart the development of age-inclusive communities."

A full cfp will be available at www.geron.org in mid-December. Deadline for submissions:

International Oral History Conference: Oral Narratives & the Politics of History Making
Ben Gurion University, December 6 – 8, 2016

This oral history conference seeks to address the ways in which oral history practice and research has challenged dominant myths and to critically re-examine how it has introduced alternative ways to understand the making of history. It also intends to shed light on instances in which oral history has been employed in the service of hegemony and to reflexively identify possible weaknesses in oral history projects. In particular, we wish to explore the place of politics in oral history accounts, and in their interpretation. We invite proposals from related areas of studies, such as: History, Anthropology, Sociology, Psychology, Education, Religion, Museology, Folklore, Cultural Studies, Gender Studies, Memory Studies, Conflict Studies, Heritage Studies, Trauma Studies, and Qualitative Research. Please send proposals of 350-500 words and a short biography to Oralhistory2016@gmail.com by March 15, 2016

Envisioning a New World – Social Innovation for Active and Healthy Ageing
SiforAGE International Conference, Barcelona, Spain, October 19-21, 2016

The SiforAGE Project – Social Innovation for Active and Healthy Ageing for Sustainable Economic Growth (7th Framework Programme of the European Commission) – has focused mainly on strategies for healthier ageing; societal participation and inequalities; policy-making for ageing communities; services and new technologies for older people; social innovation programmes; decision-making, training, and ethics; diffusion and marketing of ageing-related innovative products, measuring social impact of research on ageing; and service solutions for older people.

The SiforAGE research results, together with the findings of researchers presenting papers at the Conference, will provide a vision of the nature of society and the quality of life to be expected in the near future – a new world, a new reality – at a time when global, generational imbalances are on the brink of further aggravation. Conference convenors welcome proposals for paper and poster presentations on these and related topics. Abstracts (max. 300 words), together with a short bio (max. 200 words), should be sent as email attachments to conference@siforage.eu by April 30, 2016. Please see the SiforAGE International Conference website for details: www.siforageconference2016.eu

Conferences and Events

131st MLA Annual Convention

Austin, TX, January 7-10, 2016

The January 2016 MLA Convention, to be held in Austin, will have as its presidential theme Literature and Its Publics: Past, Present, and Future. This theme invites MLA members to consider the public face of all our objects of attention: literature and other kinds of texts, as well as film, digital media, and rhetoric. It encourages us to discuss how these objects move among the arts and how our field engages other intellectual disciplines; to reflect on literature's past publics and speculate on its future publics; and to think about media, reception, audience, commentary, translation, and adaptation—and more—as ways of connecting to a public. Care and the End of Life: A Dying and Death Project

London, United Kingdom, January 18-20, 2016

This inclusive interdisciplinary event aims to explore the connections between health care systems at work across the world, matters of public, social and legal policy, caregivers and care providers, and people ('patients') who strive to make sense of suffering and find themselves at the end-of-life. The meeting specifically aims to consider how health care systems, patients and staff intersect and interact during hospice and palliative care interventions. Attention will be given to illuminating the importance of what takes place in the relationship between the caregiver/provider and the person/patient and the ways in which this informs end-of-life issues and decisions. Understanding the frameworks these create for shaping the experiences of people who are suffering and nearing the end of their lives, especially within hospice and palliative care contexts, will also be assessed and explored. We are interested in exploring the intersections between the medical, the social and the personal. Learn more here.

Ageing, Body and Society Study Group 7th Annual Conference: Ageing and Culture
University of Manchester, February 26, 2016

This year the Ageing, Body and Society study group is holding its annual day conference in Manchester, in collaboration with MICRA, University of Manchester. The theme of the day is Ageing and Culture. Our aim is to bring together academics and researchers from the arts and humanities, the sociology of ageing and social gerontology to provide a critical analysis of key perspectives and debates, and consider avenues for future agendas, within the field of cultural gerontology. We encourage researchers to share their perspectives on 'ageing and culture' and welcome different theoretical and methodological approaches, emergent ideas, work in progress, practitioner perspectives, and empirical findings. Association for Gerontology in Higher Education (AGHE) Annual Meeting
Long Beach, CA, March 3-6, 2016

AGHE's 2016 Annual Meeting and Educational Leadership Conference will convene in Long Beach, CA. The theme for 2016 is "Developing Educational Leadership in Gerontology Worldwide." We will continue to focus on our core function – pedagogical issues in gerontology – with an international flair. Learn more at <http://www.aghe.org/events/annual-meeting>

Writing Lives across the Disciplines
California State University Fullerton, March 18-20, 2016

The aim of this conference is to draw together scholars and writers from a variety of backgrounds to discuss the dimensions of writing lives broadly conceived. In what ways do the disciplines inform the ways in which life writing is practiced and perceived? What do interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary perspectives bring to the creation of life narratives? "Writing Lives across the Disciplines" is the Fourth Annual CSUF Liberal Studies Conference. Aging in America Conference
Washington, DC, March 20-24, 2016

Aging in America hosts a vibrant community of professionals who work with older adults who meet as a community to discuss a multitude of issues affecting our older adult population. The topics covered at the conference reflect the issues that all professionals face today. They are multifaceted and multidisciplinary, going beyond the boundaries of geography and discipline. We will discuss the latest developments in aging in community, managed care, public policy, caregiving, mental health, poverty, elder abuse, technology, brain health, reframing aging and much more. Noted experts include Kathy Greenlee, Ken Dychtwald, Jo Ann Jenkins, Nora Super, Jim Firman, Cynthia Hutchins, Joann Lynn, Rodney Harrell and many others. Visit www.asaging.org/aia to learn more.

Doing the Body in the 21st Century

University of Pittsburgh, PA, March 31-April 2, 2016

However conceived—as embodied subjectivities or collectivities, as bodies of literature or land mass—bodies remain the sites and subjects of theorizing, engineering, action, affect, art, and control. At this cultural moment with global technologies shrinking distances between some bodies, yet exposing chasms between others, at a time when STEM are transforming the humanities and arts, considerations of how bodies of all types are represented, theorized, studied, and transformed are themselves in a period of transition. Because the study of the body and of bodies has changed dramatically in the last decade, we will gather a group of diverse scholars to talk across traditional disciplines and to take stock of where these studies are and where they are heading. Cultures of Harm in Institutions of Care: Historical & Contemporary Perspectives

Birkbeck, University of London, April 15-16, 2016

In 1921, Dr Montagu Lomax published a searing indictment of Prestwich Asylum exposing an entrenched sub-culture of malpractice, negligence and abuse. Recent historical research has shown that many of the same practices were still taking place at Prestwich fifty years later. Similar abuses continue today. Stafford Hospital, Winterbourne View and the crimes committed by Jimmy Savile are among the more recent examples of how systemic violence and neglect can be visited upon some of society's most vulnerable individuals in institutions that have been charged with a special duty of care. This two-day conference will explore the shifting political, socio-economic, cultural and medical influences that have formed and perpetuated cultures of harm from the eighteenth century to the present day across the world. We are particularly interested in the production of harmful practices –physical, sexual and psychological violence directed by one person or group against another in therapeutic and caring environments. These might include hospitals and infirmaries, psychiatric facilities, religious institutions, care homes, children's homes and educational establishments, as well as infirmaries and medical spaces in prisons and correctional institutions, military barracks, camps and workhouses. Scholarships, Fellowships, and Job Postings

Rice Academy Postdoctoral Fellows Program

Rice University is pleased to announce and invite applications for the Rice Academy Postdoctoral Fellows Program. The 2016 competition focuses exclusively on topics broadly related to health. The two-year Rice Academy Postdoctoral Fellowships are open to exceptional scholars who have recently earned the doctoral degree in any area, including medicine, and who want to pursue research with faculty at Rice University. Applications are particularly welcome from those who are interested in interdisciplinary approaches to scholarship.

The Rice Academy Postdoctoral Fellowship offers a close, mentored relationship with two specific faculty members, a competitive salary with benefits, and more.

Candidates for the Rice Academy Postdoctoral Fellowship must submit a research proposal (three pages maximum), CV, sample publication or other work of scholarship, the names of two Rice University faculty members with whom candidates would like to work (we encourage applicants to contact these faculty members in advance of submitting final applications), and three letters of recommendation. Applicants must have earned the doctoral degree between September 1, 2012, and August 31, 2016. All applications should be submitted electronically at riceacademy.rice.edu by January 11, 2016.

Post-Doctoral Fellowships in the Humanities, Emory University

The Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry of Emory University is accepting applications for up to three Post-Doctoral fellowships for an academic year of study, teaching, and residence in the Center. The FCHI Fellows Program offers research opportunities to those trained in the humanities as traditionally defined and to others seriously interested in humanistic issues; research projects must be humanistic, but fellows may hold the Ph.D. in any discipline. We especially seek applicants and projects that will benefit from and contribute to the interdisciplinary nature of the group of Fellows and the work of the FCHI.

Post-Doctoral Fellows, who must have the Ph.D. in hand before the submission of their applications, are awarded to those who have held the Ph.D. for no more than six years before receiving the fellowship. The deadline for submission of completed applications is January 14, 2016. Learn more at <http://www.fchi.emory.edu/home/fellowships/programs.html>.

Tenure-track Position in Aging and Health, University of Massachusetts Boston

The Department of Gerontology in the John W. McCormack Graduate School of Policy and Global Studies at the University of Massachusetts Boston seeks to fill one position at the tenure track assistant professor rank to join our faculty on September 1, 2016. The department is building on its strengths in the broad field of aging and health. All candidates should have an emerging or established program of research with evidence of external funding or evidence of the ability to achieve external funding. Applicants must possess an earned doctorate in one of the following fields by September 1, 2016, gerontology, public health, sociology, psychology, demography, economics, social work, organizational studies, public policy, public administration, nursing, or political science. Applicants with terminal degrees in other fields will also be considered. Research expertise in one or more of the following areas is sought: health disparities and vulnerable populations, mental health, and physical health, including mortality. Review of applications begins January 15, 2016 and will continue until the position is filled.

New Fellowship at the Center for Engaged Scholarship

The Center for Engaged Scholarship has announced that it will give two or three dissertation fellowships of $25,000 in the 2016-2017 academic year to students in the social sciences whose research is of high quality and that has the promise of contributing to progressive social change. The competition is open to social science PhD students of any nationality at U.S. universities. The Center defines progressive as advancing the values of equality, stronger democratic institutions, and environmental sustainability. One of the motivations behind the dissertation fellowship is to counter the professional pressures on graduate students to frame their work as objective and apolitical. Deadline: January 31, 2016. For more information and to apply, visit cescholar.org.

Professor and Chair, Department of Women's Studies

University of Maryland, College Park
