About the Newsletter

Items are listed by due date (if applicable) and by category. We welcome updates relevant to the age studies world, including calls for papers, journal articles, recently published books, twitter feeds, blogs, job postings and others. We also invite brief (450 words or less) thought pieces on issues or ideas pertaining to aging and age studies. The deadline for submissions is the 20th of the prior month. Please visit our website for more information or to submit an item for the newsletter. Thanks to all who contributed news items for this issue of NANAS eNews!

International Network for Critical Gerontology

The International Network for Critical Gerontology brings together international scholars and graduate students interested in critical approaches to the study of aging and late life. Based at McMaster University in Canada, this virtual network links international scholars from various disciplinary perspectives in the humanities and social sciences. It provides a forum to consider contemporary issues in social/cultural gerontology, reflect on theoretical and conceptual questions in the field, and discuss new insights and developments. ## Calls for Abstracts, Papers, or Panels

Active CFPs are arranged by submission deadline.

N.B. NANAS members who seek official NANAS affiliation or sponsorship for a panel or project should provide details to any member of the Governing Council, who will then bring the proposal to the Governing Council for consideration.

No Deadline Specified or Ongoing Submissions Accepted

Age, Culture, Humanities: An Interdisciplinary Journal

Age, Culture, Humanities promotes cross-disciplinary, critical investigations of the experiences of age, aging, and old age, as seen through the lens of the humanities and arts. The goals are to consider age as a category of identity, advance understanding of the aging process and of age differences across the lifespan, interrogate cultural articulations of aging and old age, and generate innovative, engaging scholarly approaches to the study of age and aging in the humanities. The journal is affiliated with the North American Network in Aging Studies (NANAS) and the European Network in Aging Studies (ENAS). All manuscripts undergo editorial screening; scholarly articles are selected for publication through a double-blind peer review process. The journal is published annually, in both print and open access digital editions. The journal invites submissions in the following areas:

- Rigorous scholarly articles on topics that investigate the critical intersections of the arts and humanities with the aging process and with age across the lifespan.
- Scholarly position papers or curated forums on critical themes related to the areas of study listed above.
- Brief, well-theorized essays on teaching humanities approaches to age and aging.
- Reviews of recent book publications in humanities and arts scholarship relevant to age and aging and of social science or gerontology scholarship relevant to the arts and/or humanities; reviews of conferences or symposia in these fields; reviews of relevant digital humanities projects and research tools. Proposals for extended review essays are also welcome.
- Reviews of recent fiction, creative non-fiction, poetry, drama, film, performances, and art exhibitions relevant to age, aging, or old age.
- Proposals for themed clusters in future issues are also welcome.

Anthropology & Aging

Anthropology & Aging, published by the Association for Anthropology & Gerontology (AAGE) in cooperation with the University of Pittsburgh, is now an open-access peer-reviewed scholarly journal. Submissions are accepted on a rolling basis through the journal website, where detailed author information is available.

Anthropology & Aging is intended as a resource for anthropologists interested in issues related to aging (including intergenerational relationships, caregiving, population aging, human rights, and global health) and aging studies scholars interested in anthropology. Submissions that employ cross-disciplinary approaches and novel methodological strategies are particularly encouraged, but standard anthropological styles are also acceptable.

PGWAM Accepting Rolling Submissions

The Postgraduate Journal of Women, Ageing and Media (PGWAM) is a new online journal aimed at postgraduates and early career researchers and run by postgraduates with support from more experienced academics. The journal aims to make 'thinking with age' a key lens from which to approach research focused on women, ageing and the media (film, television, screen media, popular music, advertising radio and the press).

PGWAM invites submissions in article form, but also warmly welcomes contributions which take a more creative or innovative approach, such as photo essays and reports. Please contact us for more information or to make a proposal. Please submit your manuscript via email: pgwamjournal@glos.ac.uk

Ageing & Society Call for Book Proposals

The Ageing & Society Research Network is seeking new academic book proposals. We welcome submissions from across national origins, experience levels, and disciplinary perspectives. Our publishing process is not driven by potential sales, but by the quality of the work. Books on niche topics or specialized subject matter are welcome. We accept proposals for manuscripts between 30,000 and 150,000 words for individual or jointly authored works, edited collections, re-issued or out-of-copyright classics with new introductions, and PhD dissertations or theses that are rewritten to conform to "book" writing style and genre.

Ageing and Society: Seventh Interdisciplinary Conference

University of California at Berkeley, Berkeley, CA, November 3-4, 2017

This knowledge community is brought together by a common concern for learning and an interest to explore issues of concern in the fields of aging and society, and in their social interconnections and implications. We are inviting proposals for paper presentations, workshops/interactive sessions, posters/exhibits, or colloquia addressing aging and society through one of the following themes: economic and demographic perspectives on aging; medical perspectives on aging, health, and wellness; public policy and public perspectives on aging; and social and cultural perspectives on aging. ### Rethinking Film Bodies: Beyond Gender, Genre, and Excess

SCMS, Toronto, ON, March 14-18, 2018

Over a quarter of a century ago, Linda Williams' groundbreaking "Film Bodies: Gender, Genre, and Excess" was published in Film Quarterly. Her seminal article not only brought together distinct areas of film studies (genre criticism, spectatorial response, taste cultures, gender and sexuality, emotion and sensation in cinema) that are still highly relevant today, but also theoretical frameworks that have traditionally been kept separate. Although grounded in a psychoanalytic model for understanding structures of desire, fantasy, and identification, Williams' essay at the same time marked a turning point towards a corpus of scholarship that is more attuned to and engaged with the embodied film-viewing experience. We propose returning to "Film Bodies" in light of the exponentially growing scholarly thought on and through horror, pornography, and melodrama in the past twenty years, as well as a renewed interest in the problematics of materiality, perception, feeling and sensation in the wake of the affective turn. ### Technology and Aging – Deadline Extended

The Gerontologist is currently welcoming submissions for a forthcoming special issue titled "Technology and Aging." The editors are planning to highlight how technology can enhance the quality of life for older people and support aging in place. Quantitative, qualitative, and mixed-methods approaches are welcome from disciplines that include anthropology, computer science, economics, engineering, human factors, humanities, law, medicine, psychology, robotics, social work, and sociology. In keeping with the applied research mission of The Gerontologist, articles should identify implications for policy or practice. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for abstract submissions extended to August 11, 2017

Emerging Research on Later Life: ACT Graduate Student/Postdoctoral Fellow Symposium

Concordia University, Montreal, October 5, 2017

The research project Ageing + Communication + Technologies (ACT), housed in the Department of Communication Studies at Concordia University, is seeking proposals for its first graduate student and postdoctoral fellow symposium. This event brings together emerging researchers from multiple disciplines working on matters related to ageing. We invite interventions that fit within the mandate of ACT, specifically, research understood to fall within one or more of its three axes: (1) agency in ageing: collaborative creativity and the digital arts in later life; (2) critical mediations: everyday life and the cultures of ageing; or (3) telecommunication technologies: ageing in networked societies. Graduate students and postdoctoral fellows from all disciplines are invited to participate, and artistic and other non-traditional contributions are welcome. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: September 1, 2017

Social Histories of Neoliberalism: CFP for Special Issue of the Journal of Social History

What does the history of neoliberalism look like from the bottom-up? In recent years, historians have identified the 1970s and the 1980s as the dawning of a new era in global political economy. Its contours are complex and contradictory: old modes of production have been disrupted by technological transformations, new forms of financialization, and a shifting global geography of work; state regulation of the economy has been rolled back and delegitimized; the emergence of social movements committed to new forms of freedom has been accompanied by new forms of coercion and policing. While intellectual, economic, and political historians have begun to sketch the “commanding heights” of these transformations, we know far less about the lived experience of these important developments. And while these transformations in political economy were clearly global in their implications, our narratives of these years remain largely centered on the U.S. and Western Europe. The Journal of Social History is preparing a special issue devoted to exploring the history of neoliberalism at the grass-roots, the margins, and the periphery. “Social Histories of Neoliberalism” will feature articles revealing the lived experience of recent economic and political transformations from a variety of ignored locations around the world. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for abstract submissions: September 1, 2017

Dementia and Cultural Narratives Symposium

University of Aston, UK, December 7-8, 2017

This symposium will explore the growing body of cultural representations of dementia. We invite papers that analyze not only how forms of dementia are represented, but also how different texts and contexts may occasion innovative textual strategies and demand different ways of reading/viewing. We hope to instigate discussion of dementia in culture across a range of texts and contexts, insisting upon the specificity as well as the shared dimensions of narratives of ageing and illness in the construction of cultural heritage. We welcome papers that analyze cultural narratives and that consider the theoretical and political issues at stake in the area of dementia and cultural narrative. This symposium is the inaugural event of the new international Dementia and Cultural Narrative network. Proposals should be approximately 250 words and accompanied by a short biographical note. We welcome papers from scholars at all stages of their careers. This is a FREE event. Please send proposals to Raquel Medina (r.medina@aston.ac.uk) and Sarah Falcus (s.j.falcus@hud.ac.uk) by September 15, 2017

“New Ways of Doing Things”: SF, Identity, and World-Making

American Comparative Literature Association (ACLA), Los Angeles, March 29-April 1, 2018

Diverse and capacious in scope, SF challenges its readers to think differently about diversity. As such, this seminar intends to explore the importance of reading SF by authors of color across ethno-racial and transnational lines. What common literary patterns can be discerned across SF by authors of color and how does the examination of SF across ethno-racial and national boundaries expand our analytical and comparative methodologies? How does SF by authors of color “critique,” “pervert,” and “fuck with” the Eurocentric literary tradition? How do the literary tropes of SF enable a greater understanding of human identity and difference? How does the exploration of racial identity and politics inflect or challenge narrative forms and literary expectations in SF? How does speculative fiction enable authors of color to explore the silences produced and reproduced by the historical archive and the literary canon? Access the full cfp here. ### Women and Ageing: Private Meaning, Social Lives

Guest editors: Dr Margaret O'Neill (UL); Dr Michaela Schrage-Frueh (NUIG)

The editors of this Special Issue of Life Writing seek original articles on aspects of women and ageing as related to life writing. Submissions may take the form of academic articles or critically informed reflective essays. Contributions might focus on all forms of life writing, including older women's diaries, journals, memoirs, letters, autobiography, biography as well as digital forms of life writing. Essays should be 7,000-8,000 words, including all quotations and bibliographic references. Each article should have an abstract of about 200 words and four or five keywords. The form of referencing should follow MLA guidelines, and authors should use endnotes rather than footnotes. Please submit your essay, or send any queries, to ageing.women@gmail.com. Deadline for submissions: September 30, 2017

Mirror, Mirror: Perceptions, Deceptions, and Reflections in Time

London, UK, March 10, 2018

Since ancient times, mirrors have been viewed as place where the dual worlds of soul and self merge. In the 21st century, our reflections may obscure rather than uncover the truths we once searched for. Through technology, we can recreate ourselves and the world around us. We see our altered, perfected reflections in our photos, on our web cams, and in advertising. Images may come to show not necessarily our realities, but visions of the world that we prefer. Indeed, altered visions and the falsehoods they purvey may serve as instruments for political gain, for the accumulation of personal wealth, and as a means of repression. This conference explores how our virtual concepts and reconstructed worlds impact humanity, the arts, and nature in the age of rising anthropocentrism. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: September 30, 2017

Frontiers of Narrative Studies

A peer-reviewed journal of international scope, Frontiers of Narrative Studies features articles reporting results of research in all branches of narrative studies, in-depth reviews of selected current literature in the field, and occasional guest editorials and reports. Its broad range of scholarship includes narratives across a variety of media, including literary writing, film and television, journalism, and graphic narratives. It welcomes theoretically sophisticated essays that examine narratives of all kinds from a host of critical, interdisciplinary, or cross-cultural perspectives. Particular emphasis is placed upon state-of-the-art research in the field of interdisciplinary narrative inquiries. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: September 30, 2017

Call for Abstracts for Panel on Aging and the Print Media

XIX International Sociological Association (ISA) World Congress of Sociology, Toronto, Canada, July 15-21, 2018

Despite the growing use of the internet and in addition to the enduring popularity of broadcast media forms such as movies and television, print media forms persist in their relevance and widespread use. Scholars interested in aging have long examined the (under)representations of older adults in the print media, and have often analyzed the implications of both negative and positive portrayals of aging in magazines and newspapers.

Aiming to continue in this tradition as well as to expand its parameters, this session (sponsored by ISA Research Committee 11: Sociology of Aging) welcomes papers investigating any element of the relationship between aging and the print media as broadly defined – thus aging not only in relation to magazines, newspapers and books, but also aging as related to such print media formats as greeting cards or comics. Thematic content analyses of these media are welcomed, but also encouraged are less common approaches to the subject (e.g., involving audience reception or visual methods) or papers that focus on understudied and/or marginalized populations (e.g., racialized, LGBTQ or faith-based communities, or those who are aging with disabilities). Please contact Dana Sawchuk dsawchuk@wlu.ca for more information, or see the ISA website at: <http://www.isa-sociology.org/en/conferences/world-congress/toronto-2018/call-for-abstracts/> Abstracts must be submitted by September 30, 2017.

2018 PCA/ACA Annual Conference—Biographies Area

Indianapolis, Indiana, March 28-31, 2018

The Popular Culture Association/American Culture Association annual conference will be held on March 28-31, 2018 at the J.W. Marriott In Indianapolis, Indiana. Scholars from a wide variety of disciplines will meet to share their Popular Culture research and interests.

The Biographies Area is soliciting papers that examine the connections between biography and popular culture. Papers and full panel presentations regarding any aspect of popular culture and biography are encouraged. Prospective presenters should enter their proposals in the PCA/ACA 2017 Event Management database at <https://conference.pcaaca.org/>. The deadline is October 1, 2017.

Dismantling Ableism: The Moral Imperative for Leaders

The Review of Disability Studies: An International Journal (RDS) seeks proposals for the special forum, “Disability and Leadership Preparation: The Moral Imperative.” How do we prepare leaders to address both institutional ableism and racism in systems such as discipline and disability classification? How do educational leaders take on activist roles for inclusion and social justice? What does the future of leadership look like when exploring issues through an intersectionality lens? What do other professional university preparation programs, such as Health, Policy, Human Services do to cultivate the moral and ethical leadership necessary to change existing systems? ## Palgrave Studies in Mediating Kinship, Representation, and Difference

This book series brings together analyses of familial and kin relationships with emerging and new technologies which allow for the creation, maintenance and expansion of family. We use the term “family” as a working truth with a wide range of meanings in an attempt to address the feelings of family belonging across all aspects of social location: ability, age, race, ethnicity, nationality, sexuality, gender identity, body size, social class and beyond. This book series aims to explore phenomena located at the intersection of technologies including those which allow for family creation, migration, communication, reunion and the family as a site of difference. The individual volumes in this series will offer insightful analyses of the representations of these phenomena in media, social media, literature, popular culture and corporeal settings. Series editors invite proposals for monographs, edited collections, and shorter single-authored books (30,000 – 50,000 words). Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: October 1, 2017

Technologies of Frankenstein, 1818-2018

Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, NJ, March 7-9, 2018

Frankenstein continues to inspire discourse in scholarly, popular, and creative culture about the Monstrous, the Outsider, the Other, and scientific ethics. This conference will examine such connections in our thinking about humanism and techno-science from the novel’s publication to the present. We construe broadly the intersecting themes of humanism, technology, and science and we welcome proposals from all fields of study for presentations that add a twenty-first century perspective to Frankenstein. ## a/b: Auto/Biography Studies Special Issue on Donna Haraway

a/b: Auto/Biography Studies seeks original articles for a special issue on “Engaging Donna Haraway: Lives in the Natureculture Web” to be published as volume 34.3, Autumn 2019. A major theorist in such diverse areas as feminisms, Marxism, new materialism, science studies, posthumanism, animal studies, ecocriticism, and digital media, among others, Donna Haraway has only tangentially been considered as integral to life writing studies. This special issue seeks to redress that omission and show how Haraway's decades-long career as a major theoretical voice and provocateur of thinking about new and complex connections across technology, species, and disciplines has not only impacted broad swatches of academic thought but has also been, continues to be, and will in the future be integral to life writing studies. With the focus squarely on the ways in which Haraway's voice and thought have affected, and will continue to affect and effect life writing studies, we invite articles focused within any discipline in the humanities, social sciences, or sciences. We are, however, especially interested in those that break down disciplinary boundaries. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: October 15, 2017

Digital Technologies, Bodies, and Embodiments

In the last five years or so, rhetoric and composition scholarship has offered work that brings digital media and bodies to the forefront to shape pedagogical praxis, illuminate cultural practices, and extend composition studies (into writing studies). The advent and, now, ubiquity of digital media and digital writing practices demands a rethinking of the relationships between rhetoric, bodies, embodiments, and writing (as broadly construed): how writing embodies and composes a writer; how writing embodies and composes others; and, inversely, how bodies and embodiments compose hegemonic regimes of—or sites of resistance to—contemporary writing modalities, both in and outside the writing classroom. ### Lives Outside the Lines: Gender and Genre in the Americas

We invite proposals for a special issue of a/b: Auto/Biography Studies clustered around issues of gender and genre with special attention given to trauma and illness studies, archival methodologies, and transnational themes in the Americas. All essays must follow the format of the MLA Handbook for Writers of Research Papers (8th ed.) and the a/b Style Sheet, which can be found on our website: www.tandfonline.com/raut. Send original articles of 6,000-8,000 words (including works cited and notes) to Eva C. Karpinski (evakarp@yorku.ca) and Ricia Anne Chansky (ricia.chansky@upr.edu) on or before October 31, 2017. Inquiries also welcome.

Call for Papers: Vol. 36 of Research in the Sociology of Health Care

The theme for this volume is Gender, Women's Health Care Concerns and other Social Factors in Health and Health Care. Papers dealing with macro-level system issues and micro-level issues involving gender, women's health care concerns and other social factors are sought. This includes examination of health and health care issues of patients or of providers of care both in the United States and in other countries. Papers that focus on linkages to policy, population concerns and either patients or providers of care as ways to meet health care needs of people both in the US and in other countries are solicited. This volume will be published by Emerald Press. The volume will contain 10 to 14 papers, generally between 20 and 35 pages in length. For an initial indication of interest in outlines or abstracts, please contact the same address no later than November 1, 2017. Send as an email to: Jennie Jacobs Kronenfeld, Professor Emerita Sociology Program, Arizona State University, (phone 480 991-3920; E-mail, Jennie.Kronenfeld@asu.edu). Initial inquiries by email are encouraged.

Ethnicity and Kinship: Interdisciplinary Approaches to Family, Community, and Difference

University of Graz, May 30-June 2, 2018

Taken together, queer, feminist, critical race theorist, and transnational revisions have liberated discussions of family and kinship from pressing assumptions about family values. The breadth of scholarship on ethnicity and kinship furthermore centers on present and historical counter-narratives to discursively and ideologically constructed family ideals. In particular, in times of increasing instrumentalization of “the family,” approaching notions of family, community, and difference from interdisciplinary angles facilitates engaging scholarship which focuses both on the way we are not and “the way we never were” (Stephanie Coontz). The 2018 MESEA conference seeks to explore this diversity of approaches to ethnicity and kinship by inviting paper proposals from all disciplines and perspectives. Access the full cfp here. Nordic Congress in Gerontology: Lessons of a Life Time

Oslo, Norway, May 2-4, 2018

The 24th Nordic Congress in Gerontology (24 NKG) will be held in Oslo. Join your colleagues and friends in sharing new findings in the field of ageing and life course research! Originally a congress for Nordic scholars, the NKG has grown to become one of the most important meetings on ageing, attracting participants from all over the world. The congress is multidisciplinary and calls for contributions from a wide range of disciplines, including health sciences, economy, social sciences, medicine, humanities and arts. This is also mirrored in the congress theme: Lessons of a Life Time, encouraging a comprehensive view on ageing and life course research. Please visit the official website at www.24nkg.no for more information. Deadline for submissions: November 15, 2017

Call for Book Proposals: Lexington Studies in Communication and Storytelling

This series engages scholarship in mediated storytelling: be it the traditional book or television program, the performed oral narrative, or the emerging media platform. Interdisciplinary in scope, this series looks at the myriad theoretical and practical approaches to the story, broadly defined. From the audience member-turned creator to new narrative, this series explores what storytelling means in the twenty-first century. We are looking for book proposals for this series. We are looking for book proposals to be published in 2018 and 2019. Edited collections as well as books by single author(s) are welcomed. If you are interested in submitting a proposal, please contact Kathleen M. Ryan at kathleen.ryan@colorado.edu and Deborah A. Gendered Bodies in Transit: Between Vulnerability and Resistance

This special issue of CLCWeb: Comparative Literature and Culture proposes to investigate the centrality of mechanisms of resistance and resilience in gendered bodies in transit in contemporary global Anglophone literatures and cultures. Considering vulnerability not as a limit but as a potentially enabling condition, the issue wishes to tackle the exploration of individual and collective responses to traumas and marginalization through the comparative analysis of cultural and literary forms. We invite contributions that, addressing literary and cultural representations of historical, as well as racial, medical, and neoliberal violence, investigate the ways in which the gendered body in transit responds to traumatic experiences and articulates forms of agency leading to the construction of new forms of subjectivity and community. We also encourage articles that tackle the complexity of the processes of regeneration and healing, opening the debate on issues of subversion and resilience of marginalised gender identities in their intersection with race and class. a/b: Auto/Biography Studies Special Issue on Trans Narratives

“Trans” has taken on a number of important theoretical and critical meanings inside and outside the academy. A prefix with the sense, in the OED. of ‘across, through, over, to or on the other side of, beyond, outside of, from one place, person, thing, or state to another,’ “trans” can attach itself to other words to connote movement and change, and in this way the term affects what we think we know about embodied identities, media or nation, working to unsettle knowledge about the world we live in. In this special issue we seek to interrogate the idea of “trans” in multiple registers, bringing a prefix to the center of life writing studies at the present time. We especially want to understand through life writing and its theory what “trans” means when we talk about identities and bodies, and understand better what the critical terms “transmedia” and “transnational” can mean for the field. We welcome work across a variety of disciplines and approaches. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 15, 2018

Conferences and Events

Dementia Lab 2017 - Stories from Design and Research

Dortmund, Germany, September 6-7, 2017

The theme for this year’s Dementia Lab is sharing the underlying questions that designers, researchers and educators face in their design process for and together with people with dementia. These questions vary from such practical challenges as recruiting persons with dementia to finding funding before a project begins or failing to have a method work as expected. Designers may struggle to find a way of communicating with people with dementia when words fail or have a hard time coping with the stress of dealing with people who are in constant mental and physical decline. Finally, once a design is made, designers and researchers often encounter resistance to the first iterations of the things designed or have difficulty integrating the designs into the routines of daily life and care. This second edition of the Dementia Lab event, wishes to support the sharing of these successes and failures. Learn more at <http://www.dementialab.com/>.

The Appearance of “Health” in History

Rice University, Houston, Texas, October 13-14, 2017

Rice University’s Department of Art History is delighted to introduce its inaugural graduate conference, Vital Constitutions, which seeks to problematize the nature of “health.” All living forms—from biological to social bodies—realize unique ways to survive and at times thrive in tenuous and hostile environments. Vital Constitutions aims to explore the conference title broadly in relation to structures by which bodies, communities, societies and environments have adapted, and been sustained, when such structures become precarious. We hope to challenge claims of normativity by considering how objects, institutions, and the “natural” environment affect conceptions of vitality. Learn more here.
