About the Newsletter

Items are listed by due date (if applicable) and by category. We welcome updates relevant to the age studies world, including calls for papers, journal articles, recently published books, twitter feeds, blogs, job postings and others. We also invite brief (450 words or less) thought pieces on issues or ideas pertaining to aging and age studies. The deadline for submissions is the 20th of the prior month. Please visit our website for more information or to submit an item for the newsletter. Thanks to all who contributed news items for this issue of NANAS eNews!

NANAS Membership Drive

NANAS is taking the long-awaited step of collecting membership fees so that we can build a stronger organization! Information about membership fees and benefits can be found on the NANAS website.

Opportunity for NANAS Graduate Student Members

The editors of Age, Culture, Humanities: An Interdisciplinary Journal are seeking graduate student volunteers to assist with promotion for the journal, including developing the journal's presence on social media. Age, Culture, Humanities, published by the Athenaeum Press of Coastal Carolina University, is the official journal of NANAS. This is a great opportunity to support NANAS and play a more active role with the journal! If you are interested, please email cport@coastal.edu. Age, Culture, Humanities also welcomes manuscript submissions from graduate students. See the CFP below for more information.

NANAS Committees

If you are interested in joining the NANAS Student Committee, Conference Committee, or Grants, Fundraising, and Public Relations Committee, please send an email to arbogast.annabelle@gmail.com.

International Network for Critical Gerontology

The International Network for Critical Gerontology brings together international scholars and graduate students interested in critical approaches to the study of aging and late life. Based at McMaster University in Canada, this virtual network links international scholars from various disciplinary perspectives in the humanities and social sciences. It provides a forum to consider contemporary issues in social/cultural gerontology, reflect on theoretical and conceptual questions in the field, and discuss new insights and developments. Calls for Abstracts, Papers, or Panels

Active CFPs are arranged by submission deadline.

N.B. NANAS members who seek official NANAS affiliation or sponsorship for a panel or project should provide details to any member of the Governing Council, who will then bring the proposal to the Governing Council for consideration.

CAG2018 - Making It Matter: Mobilizing Aging Research, Practice & Policy
Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada, October 18-20, 2018

The 47th Annual Scientific and Educational Meeting of the Canadian Association on Gerontology will be hosted by the Gerontology Research Centre at Simon Fraser University. The theme for this year's meeting is "Making it Matter: Mobilizing Aging Research, Practice & Policy." A full call for papers will be available later this month at <http://cag2018.ca/>.

Call for Section Editors - Encyclopedia of Gerontology and Population Aging

Danan Gu (United Nations Population Division) and Matthew Dupre (Duke University) were awarded a multi-year contract with Springer Publishing to serve as Editors-in-Chief for The Encyclopedia of Gerontology and Population Aging. The book will include more than 1,200 entries – bringing more than 50 Section Editors and more than 400 cross-disciplinary contributors worldwide – to provide a comprehensive, in-depth, and multi-volume collection of work that highlights established research and emerging science in population health, aging, and gerontology. The Editors-in-Chief are currently seeking NANAS members to serve as Section Editors. Section Editors' primary roles will be to (1) help shape/finalize the list of section entries in your section and (2) recruit contributors to provide the content to these entries; (3) contribute 2-3 entries in your own section or other sections if you wish; and (4) monitor the progress of entries in your section. Section Editors should be established records (i.e., Professor or Associate Professor) in the field of aging studies. If you are interested, please contact Danan Gu (gud@un.org) with your research areas and preferences.

Age, Culture, Humanities: An Interdisciplinary Journal

Age, Culture, Humanities promotes cross-disciplinary, critical investigations of the experiences of age, aging, and old age, as seen through the lens of the humanities and arts. The goals are to consider age as a category of identity, advance understanding of the aging process and of age differences across the lifespan, interrogate cultural articulations of aging and old age, and generate innovative, engaging scholarly approaches to the study of age and aging in the humanities. The journal is affiliated with the North American Network in Aging Studies (NANAS) and the European Network in Aging Studies (ENAS). All manuscripts undergo editorial screening; scholarly articles are selected for publication through a double-blind peer review process. The journal is published annually, in both print and open access digital editions. The journal invites submissions in the following areas:

- Rigorous scholarly articles on topics that investigate the critical intersections of the arts and humanities with the aging process and with age across the lifespan.
- Scholarly position papers or curated forums on critical themes related to the areas of study listed above.
- Brief, well-theorized essays on teaching humanities approaches to age and aging.

- Reviews of recent book publications in humanities and arts scholarship relevant to age and aging and of social science or gerontology scholarship relevant to the arts and/or humanities; reviews of conferences or symposia in these fields; reviews of relevant digital humanities projects and research tools. Proposals for extended review essays are also welcome.
- Reviews of recent fiction, creative non-fiction, poetry, drama, film, performances, and art exhibitions relevant to age, aging, or old age.
- Proposals for themed clusters in future issues are also welcome.

Anthropology & Aging

Anthropology & Aging, published by the Association for Anthropology & Gerontology (AAGE) in cooperation with the University of Pittsburgh, is now an open-access peer-reviewed scholarly journal. Submissions are accepted on a rolling basis through the journal website, where detailed author information is available.

Anthropology & Aging is intended as a resource for anthropologists interested in issues related to aging (including intergenerational relationships, caregiving, population aging, human rights, and global health) and aging studies scholars interested in anthropology. Submissions that employ cross-disciplinary approaches and novel methodological strategies are particularly encouraged, but standard anthropological styles are also acceptable.

PGWAM Accepting Rolling Submissions

The Postgraduate Journal of Women, Ageing and Media (PGWAM) is a new online journal aimed at postgraduates and early career researchers and run by postgraduates with support from more experienced academics. The journal aims to make ‘thinking with age’ a key lens from which to approach research focused on women, ageing and the media (film, television, screen media, popular music, advertising radio and the press).

PGWAM invites submissions in article form, but also warmly welcomes contributions which take a more creative or innovative approach, such as photo essays and reports. Please contact us for more information or to make a proposal. Please submit your manuscript via email: pgwamjournal@glos.ac.uk

Aging & Society Call for Book Proposals

The Aging & Society Research Network is seeking new academic book proposals. We welcome submissions from across national origins, experience levels, and disciplinary perspectives. Our publishing process is not driven by potential sales, but by the quality of the work. Books on niche topics or specialized subject matter are welcome. We accept proposals for manuscripts between 30,000 and 150,000 words for individual or jointly authored works, edited collections, re-issued or out-of-copyright classics with new introductions, and PhD dissertations or theses that are rewritten to conform to "book" writing style and genre.

Review of Disability Studies CFP - Disability and Shame

Shame plays a powerful role in social interactions, beliefs, and institutions. For much of history and across varied cultural contexts, disability provoked shame. Whether understood as the result of personal failings, sins of a family, misapplication of scientific findings, or empirical evidence of an unhappy deity, experiencing disability involved largely unquestioned shaming. During the last decades of the twentieth century, progress much attributed to disability rights movements finally created expanding space between disability and shame. Yet, shame remains a powerful and often-accepted tool of social control, an incorporated pillar of our social infrastructures along with cultural norms, popular culture, and public policy.

This Call for Papers proposes a forum on the subject of shame and disability, broadly conceived. We expect that the work solicited for this Call will appeal to scholars of mental health, anthropology, queer and gender studies, education, and child studies, among others. Prospective authors are encouraged to consult the RDS website at www.rds.hawaii.edu for more information about the journal and its formatting guidelines. Manuscript submissions are due January 1, 2018.

The Good, the Bad & the Monster. Queers, Crips & Other Misfits off the Edge of the Map
Museum of Water, Coimbra, Portugal, May 14-18, 2018

The INTIMATE Summer School embraces monstrosity in what it offers regarding the undoing of binaries and the celebration of embodied differences. We aim to explore who are the contemporary monsters, what are the dichotomies they challenge and how narratives on monsters contribute to definitions of human. We want to explore monsters as a possible theoretical figuration to escape mainstream celebrations of humanity and to embrace the vivid possibilities offered by interdisciplinary, boundary-crossing contributions from different fields of knowledge. We aim at creating spaces to discuss contributions and experiences that often fall out of the map even within critical studies. Drawing on timely, interdisciplinary theoretical contributions and intersectional empirical work on queers, crips and other misfits, the INTIMATE Summer School will consolidate academic knowledge in the fields of sexual and gender dissidence, disability and other forms of embodied misfit. Applicants should be PhD students in the fields of Social Sciences and Humanities. Learn more here. Deadline for applications: January 5, 2018

Theatre and Embodiment - 2018 SETC Theatre Symposium
Agnes Scott College, Decatur, GA, April 13-15, 2018

At the heart of the theatrical act is the simultaneous live presence of the actor and the audience. Given primacy of bodies in and to the theatrical act, how do we understand those bodies as communicating meaning? How do bodies understand themselves as operating within the theatrical or performative context? The 2018 Southeastern Theatre Conference (SETC) Theatre Symposium will focus on the interplay between theatre and embodiment. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 5, 2018

CFP: Edited Collection on Rites of Passage and the Contemporary Life Course

Abstracts are invited from US-based scholars for contributions to a proposed new edited collection of chapters exploring contemporary Rites of Passage in a secular context. Rooted in Rites of Passage theory (van Gennep, 1960; Turner, 1966) the proposed book will address the complexities inherent in current understandings of the life course structure, and will emphasise wider societal changes and influences informing and defining present-day points of transition through the lens of expressions of passage. The proposed book will seek to highlight the continuing relevance, diversity and creativity of ritual or customary passage performances / processes and is ethnographic in its approach to the subject. Chapters are intended to offer contextualised descriptions and analyses of performances across the life course. While contributors currently engaged in the project are informed by UK-based passage traditions and innovations, we are seeking contributions from a US perspective to enrich and broaden the text, and to emphasise the commonalities intrinsic to Rites of Passage while acknowledging cultural difference. The editors would particularly welcome contributions which incorporate some reflection on British cultural formation or practices, either as complementary pieces to the topics explored or as a stand-alone reflection on passage within contrasting cultures. Expressions of interest including a 300 word abstract and short academic biography should be submitted to Dr Catherine Bannister (University of Sheffield) and Dr Victoria L Newton (The Open University) at c.bannister@sheffield.ac.uk by January 9, 2018.

Religion, Spirituality, and Aging

Research in fields like public health and social work has demonstrated that enhanced well-being as well as positive health and psychosocial outcomes are associated with different aspects of religious participation or spirituality. The nuances surrounding the intersection of religion and spirituality with aging is an area that warrants further investigation anthropologically. This special issue of Anthropology & Aging will examine the connection of religion and spirituality with aging and the life course. We welcome manuscripts based on research in various geographic locations worldwide. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 15, 2018

Empathic Landscapes: Walking With/In Difference
University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, OH, March 24, 2018

“Empathic Landscapes: Walking With/In Difference” is a cross-disciplinary graduate student conference that focuses on scenes of empathy—sites, settings, and passages, both implicit and explicit, concrete and conceptual, intangible. We will examine the various ways that texts (alphabetic, multimodal, embodied) can both honor and bridge the differences between us, an area of inquiry that strikes us as particularly salient in today’s political climate. Presenters are encouraged to submit creative or critical work that explores this topic as related to their field of study. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 15, 2018

Qualitative Research on Mental Health

Berlin, Germany, September 20-22, 2018

Qualitative methods offer essential insights into highly relevant phenomena such as relationship, power, and social exclusion, which other approaches are hardly able to deliver. QRMH conferences have been established as an international transdisciplinary forum for dedicated qualitative research on a range of topics in the field of mental health that raised to a global challenge, using a variety of methodologies and approaches. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 15, 2018.

Constructing Experience: Narrative Innovations Across Time and Media

University of Virginia, Charlottesville, VA, March 23-24, 2018

Narrative is an essential means through which we engage with works of art. It is also a compelling framework that we use to make sense of our own lives. Human beings—and, certainly, graduate students in the humanities—are drawn to narratives, and we seem compelled to conceptualize ourselves narratively. The University of Virginia Department of English welcomes graduate student proposals that contemplate how narrative constructs and reflects our perceptions. We invite participants to explore narrative innovations from a variety of disciplinary perspectives, in texts ranging from medieval manuscripts to narrative poems to Netflix series. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 15, 2018

a/b: Auto/Biography Studies Special Issue on Trans Narratives

“Trans” has taken on a number of important theoretical and critical meanings inside and outside the academy. A prefix with the sense, in the OED, of ‘across, through, over, to or on the other side of, beyond, outside of, from one place, person, thing, or state to another,’ “trans” can attach itself to other words to connote movement and change, and in this way the term affects what we think we know about embodied identities, media or nation, working to unsettle knowledge about the world we live in. In this special issue we seek to interrogate the idea of “trans” in multiple registers, bringing a prefix to the center of life writing studies at the present time. We especially want to understand through life writing and its theory what “trans” means when we talk about identities and bodies, and understand better what the critical terms “transmedia” and “transnational” can mean for the field. We welcome work across a variety of disciplines and approaches. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 15, 2018

Emerging Scholar Paper Award for Aging Research

The Executive Committee of Research Committee 11 (Sociology of Aging) of the International Sociological Association announces a competition for a conference participation award for best original research paper by an emerging scholar for presentation at the 2018 World Congress of Sociology 15-21 July, 2018 in Toronto, Canada. Emerging scholars include graduate students currently completing a PhD degree, and recent (five years or less) recipients of a PhD in sociology, or a related discipline, with aging or life course as a focus. Post-doctoral scholars are eligible to apply. Co-authored papers are permitted if the applicant is first author. Published work (equivalent of a ‘paper’ i.e. article or chapter) is acceptable if published in 2017 or later.

Applicants do not need to be RC11 members, but receipt of the award is conditional on membership i.e. successful applicants are expected to join RC11. We anticipate making two awards covering the conference registration fee and reimbursement for travel costs of up to $500. Honorable mention may also be awarded to one or more applicants, covering conference registration fee only. Awardees are expected to attend the conference and present a synopsis of their papers in a special award ceremony at the RC11 business meeting in Toronto in July 2018. Applicants who received an honorable mention may also be invited to present a synopsis at this session.

Papers will be judged according to perceptiveness with which issues are treated, the quality of empirical materials presented (or, in the case of conceptual/theoretical papers, the quality of theorizing), the consistency with which an analytic framework is used, the originality of ideas, and the clarity of style. Papers should be submitted to Professor Merrill Silverstein of Syracuse University (merrils@syr.edu) by January 15, 2017. For conference updates please see <http://www.isa-sociology.org/en/conferences/world-congress/toronto-2018/>

Criterion: A Journal of Literary Criticism - Winter 2018 Issue

Criterion: A Journal of Literary Criticism seeks original, well-researched, and intellectually rigorous essays written from diverse critical perspectives and about texts from any time period or literary tradition. Submissions to both the general section and the Forum should be between 3000 and 6000 words (not including the bibliography). All submissions should be double-spaced, written in English, and formatted according to the most recent MLA guidelines. Submissions should be uploaded as MS Word files through our website and online submission system. (<https://scholarsarchive.byu.edu/criterion/>) We are now accepting submissions for the general section of our Winter 2018 issue. Submission Deadline: January 16, 2018

BodyWorks: A Conference on Corporeal Representation

Northumbria University, Newcastle upon Tyne, May 3, 2018

BodyWorks takes an interdisciplinary and intersectional approach to representations of bodies, embodiment and sensory experience across literature and culture. In doing so, we welcome responses from a range of disciplines, including cultural studies, literary studies, philosophy, arts, history, education, media, social sciences and medical humanities. Through this breadth of intellectual inquiry, the event aims to draw together a range of approaches and methodologies for exploring various facets of the contemporary shift towards studies of the body and emotions in the humanities. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: January 20, 2018

Hierarchy and Inequality in Research: Practices, Ethics and Experiences

RGS-IBG Annual International Conference 2018, Cardiff University, August 28-31, 2018

The relation between researcher and their research subjects is a well-established subject of reflection and inquiry in human geography and the social sciences in general. At the same time, methods and general approaches to research have multiplied and there has been a growing focus on participative methods, action research, and lately the co-production of knowledge. A critical reflection of hierarchies in these relations can also be a contribution on its own to research on social inequalities in general.

In this session, we want to retrace how these developments have affected the ways in which social hierarchies are negotiated in different kinds of research practices and settings. We want to emphasize the tension between established patterns of hierarchy and spontaneous and unexpected events and experiences. How do those involved in the research process affect each other? Which kinds of positionalities (related to status, gender, language, ...) are played out in research practices and who is involved or pulled into the relation (only those that are co-present and enabled? While the inversion or destabilization of hierarchies in research can be experienced as a complication, it can also be highly relevant for the research questions and how they should be addressed. Taking all of these aspects together, hierarchy in research is not a stable, pre-established relation, but is dynamically produced. This entails a need for content-related reflection and ethical awareness to which this session hopefully will contribute. Please send abstracts of no more than 250 words to Lars Frers frers@usn.no and Lars Meier meier@soz.uni-frankfurt.de by January 31, 2018. These should include a title, author affiliation and email address.

Seminar: Ageing in Speculative and Science Fiction

14th ESSE Conference, Brno, Czech Republic, August 29-September 2, 2018

As transhumanists and some scientists seek the holy grail of immortality, the dialogue between speculative and science fiction and ageing technologies seems ever more complex, with newspapers claiming that 'Anti-ageing pill steps out of sci fi' and that age-extension technologies 'might seem like science fiction', and scientists defending their work in terms that distance them from sci fi. But, of course, these debates are nothing new. Sci fi and speculative fiction, as genres intimately concerned with time, have always addressed questions of longevity, immortality, the life course and demographic control, and in the process alternately troubled and reassured their readers. From Huxley's Brave New World and John Wyndham's Trouble with Lichen to Butler's Parable series, Atwood's Oryx and Crake, Ishiguro's Never Let Me Go, Magary's The Postmortal and TV and films such as Star Wars, The X-Files, and Doctor Who, 20th and 21st C speculative and science fiction have explored questions related to ageing and the life course. Speculative fiction and sci fi may be genres interested in the creation of future and other worlds, but as critics continually stress, they are also genres of both the past and the present, exciting what Suvin famously called 'cognitive estrangement'. Today, with the advent of the exponential ageing of the worldwide population, speculative and science fiction seem to be a favourable medium to present, reflect and, to some extent, foresee the challenges that the demographic revolution is bringing with it. Please send a 200-300 word abstract and short biographical note to the convenors, Sarah Falcus (S.J.Falcus@hud.ac.uk) and Maricel Oró-Piqueras (maricel.oro@dal.udl.cat), by January 31, 2018.

Critical Approaches to Age in American Literature

A Special Issue of Studies in American Fiction

Late style. Juvenilia. Coming of age. Constructions of age shape not only literary forms and representations but also our critical approaches to them, and yet, this ideologically fraught category of social organization remains neglected in US literary studies. We invite submissions for a special issue that raises new questions about the undertheorized work of age, maturation, and the stages of life in American literature. Building on the work of childhood studies, this special issue moves beyond youth to consider "age" more broadly as a key index and site of meaning for American literature and culture. As an analytic frame, age can provide an intellectual meeting ground for scholars working from a range of methodological perspectives and historical eras on related concepts such as temporality, personhood, political autonomy, and the like. An attention to age dovetails with interpretive practices such as queer theory that aim to destabilize identitarian categories and allow for alternative ways of imagining subjectivity and embodiment. Similarly, age studies intersects with disability studies in a shared attention to bodies that do not align with capitalist values of productivity and self-sufficiency. How might we envision the role of imaginative literature in the genealogy of age categories and their relation to adjacent and overlapping structures, including those of race, class, gender, and sexuality? Conformity, Resistance, Dialogue and Deviance in Health and Medicine

Liverpool, UK, July 11-13, 2018

The Society for the Social History of Medicine hosts a major biennial, international, and interdisciplinary conference. In 2018 we will explore the theme of 'Conformity, Resistance, Dialogue and Deviance in Health and Medicine'. We envisage that this conference theme will also stimulate participants to think about how medical orthodoxy has been shaped and re-molded, and how patients and practitioners choose to conform to conventional practices, seek alternatives, resist or compromise. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: February 2, 2018

Classification - University of Toronto English Graduate Conference 2018

University of Toronto, April 27, 2018

Acts of classification and categorization have found no shortage of hostility from critics in the last century. This hostility is captured by Roland Barthes, who alleges that "all classifications are oppressive," or Jacques Derrida's insistence that "there is no idealization that keeps itself pure, safe from all contamination." In contrast to thinkers like Barthes who emphasize the violence of classification, there are many strands of thought that seek to harness classification's productive and critical capabilities. Foucault's "reverse discourse," Spivak's "strategic essentialism," Crenshaw's "intersectionality," and Puar's "conviviality" are a just a few influential concepts that seek to affirm the usefulness of classification for the struggles of oppressed peoples. Lastly, work in areas of literary, film, and visual culture studies are structured by classifications: historical periods, media, and genres remain disciplinary forces that organize scholarly work in these fields (and the structure of university departments, journals, and conferences).

Our conference seeks papers that investigate, criticize, reformulate, or create classifications—or that think with, about, or against the theme of classification itself. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: February 2, 2018

Futures of Queer Theory

UC Irvine, May 11, 2018

There is something very timely about queer theory's recent attention to untimeliness, to borrow Peter Coviello's vocabulary. What forms of futurity does queerness, and queer theory, open up? Working against normative assumptions about how time is experienced and marked, Elizabeth Freeman's concept of chrononormativity theorizes "the use of time to organize individual human bodies toward maximum productivity," generating "socially meaningful embodiment through temporal regulation" (3). Read through this framework, "the future" appears as one horizon of this normativity. The Queer Theory Reading Group (QTRG) at UC Irvine invites paper proposals discussing queerness, temporal forms, and futurity. We invite presentations that inquire into the difficult terrain of temporality and futurity as it has taken shape within queer theory and other disciplines. We welcome proposals that range across disciplines, including interdisciplinary work. Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: February 10, 2018

Aging & Society: Eighth Interdisciplinary Conference

Toyo University, Tokyo, Japan, September 18–19, 2018

This knowledge community is brought together by a common concern for learning and an interest to explore issues of concern in the fields of aging and society, and in their social interconnections and implications. We are inviting proposals for paper presentations, workshops/interactive sessions, posters/exhibits, or colloquia addressing aging and society through one of the following themes: economic and demographic perspectives on aging; medical perspectives on aging, health, and wellness; public policy and public perspectives on aging; and social and cultural perspectives on aging. The 2018 special focus is “Aging, Health, Well-being and Care in a Time of Extreme Demographic Change.” Access the full cfp here. Early proposal deadline: February 18, 2018

National Women’s Studies Association 2018 Annual Conference

Atlanta, GA, November 8-11, 2018

The theme for the 2018 NWSA Annual Conference is “Just imagine. Imagining justice: Feminist visions of freedom, dream making and the radical politics of futurism.” Subthemes for the conference include:

- Afro-futurism, feminist futurists and surrealist writers and artists
- Rethinking gender, sexuality, family, disability and the bio-politics of what is or is not human?
- The future of the universities, schools, and knowledge production: maroon spaces, insurgent practices, and the future of disciplines and the interdisciplines?
- Post-capitalism: imagining new economic futures
- Revolutions and utopian projects: sustained, incomplete and derailed
- Political, cultural and artist movements that “demand the impossible:” “abolition” and beyond
- The earth’s future and the legacies of its past: environmental justice, climate change, indigeneity, land rights, wars and occupations

For more information, visit www.nwsa.org. Deadline for submissions: February 21, 2018

'Automediality'

How do people mediate their identities, selves and experiences? How do media forms and conventions limit or facilitate the possibilities for particular kinds of selfhood to be articulated? If 'autobiography' has denoted a way to write the self from the location of the self, automediality points to the range of media forms and technologies through which people engage in digital, visual, filmic, performative, textual, and transmediated forms of documenting, constructing and presenting the self. Scholars of life narrative warn us that "the self" is not a unified and pre-existing entity that can simply be transcribed or translated through media. Rather, the self is brought into being through writing-or mediation. Media technologies like the camera, the diary, social media platforms, and books each have conventions, affordances, abilities and limits that both enable and restrict the kinds of self-presentation that are possible. Particular media bring particular subjectivities to life. Examining such sites and modes of automediality can tell us about the ways in which 'technologies and subjectivity' are connected (Smith and Watson). Access the full cfp here. Deadline for submissions: February 23, 2018

2019 Stimpson Prize for Outstanding Feminist Scholarship

Signs: Journal of Women in Culture and Society is currently accepting submissions for the 2019 Catharine Stimpson Prize for Outstanding Feminist Scholarship. Designed to recognize excellence and innovation in the work of emerging feminist scholars, the Stimpson Prize is awarded biennially to the best paper in an international competition. Feminist scholars in the early years of their careers (fewer than seven years since receipt of the terminal degree) are eligible to submit. This includes current graduate students. Papers may be on any topic that falls under the broad rubric of interdisciplinary feminist scholarship, and all papers submitted for the Stimpson Prize will be considered for possible publication in Signs. The full call and submission instructions can be found here. Submissions are due March 1, 2018.

Still Julianne: Projecting Dementia on the Silvering Screen

McMaster University, L.R. Wilson Hall 1003, January 10, 2018, 1:00-2:00 pm

This presentation will delve into the complicated relationship between disability and old age in cinema by situating in a broader context Julianne Moore's Oscar award-winning performance as the linguistic professor Alice Howland diagnosed with early-onset Alzheimer's in Still Alice. Sally Chivers will raise the question of how the tools of disability studies and the disability movement could improve considerations of and actions for older adults, drawing attention to how pervasively ageism relies on ableism. Sally Chivers is Full Professor of English and Gender & Women's Studies at Trent University, where she is also a founding executive member of the Trent Centre on Aging & Society.

Film Premiere: "Cracked: New Light on Dementia"

506 Bloor St W, Toronto, ON, January 19, 2018, 8:00-9:30 pm

"Cracked: New Light on Dementia" is an innovative research-based production that raises important questions about the dominant 'tragic' ways persons with dementia are understood and treated in our society. Cracked is based on research conducted by Drs. Sherry Dupuis, Gail Mitchell, Pia Kontos, and Christine Jonas-Simpson, all of whom are health researchers who specialize in the areas of aging, dementia, and research-based drama. The play was developed collaboratively by a group of artists, the researchers, persons living with dementia and their family members. It was developed into a film in partnership with filmmaker Anthony Grani and cinematographer Ann Tipper. The event includes the premiere screening of the film, followed by a Q&A with the actors, researchers, producers, and director. Register at <http://snapd.at/pew66u6>

Postdoctoral Fellow in Digital Culture and Quantified Aging

Trent University, Peterborough, ON

We are seeking an emerging researcher to work with us on a SSHRC-funded project on “Digital Culture and Quantified Aging”. This project is funded by a 5-year Insight Grant (2017-2022), and the research team includes Dr. Barbara L. Marshall (Trent University, Principal Investigator), Dr. Stephen Katz (Trent University, Co-investigator), Dr. Isabel Pedersen (UOIT, Co-Investigator) and Dr. Wendy Martin (Brunel University London, Collaborator). The objectives of the project are to trace the origins and development of the digital, or algorithmic, measurement of 'age' and age-related characteristics; analyze the conceptualization, design, marketing and consumer take-up of tracking and measuring technologies aimed at aging individuals; and explore how these technologies become part of the speculative futures of aging, anti-aging, and revisions of care in aging societies. We anticipate a start date in the spring of 2018 for this one-year position (with the possibility of extension). Review of applications will begin on February 1, 2018 and applications will be considered until the position is filled. Additional information is available here.
